

Building and Sustaining a Culture of Compliance and Ethics: Compliance Training

Robert Roach, Vice President, Chief Global Compliance Officer, New York University. New York University.

June 2, 2020

- Whether your institution has a long established compliance training program or has recently started to focus on this area, compliance training is a critical element of every university compliance program and should be routinely reviewed and updated
- This session will focus on ways in which compliance officers can enhance compliance training and awareness programs across their institution in order to ensure a sustained and strong culture of compliance
- We will explore various topics and answer fundamental questions, such as: What are the basic training elements every university compliance training and awareness program should have? and How can institutions scale up their current training efforts?

This document is only available to subscribers

Purchase