He will find the truth and he will report truth...whatever it is.

The United States Department of Justice Inspector General, Michael Horowitz, is about to release a report that may cause some people to become politically charged. I want to say something before his results are released, because my comments may be dismissed as biased after his results are released.

To be clear, I know Michael, but I have no idea what his report will say. I have never discussed anything related to this subject with him. I really haven't even talked to him much since he became IG. And if you knew Michael like I know Michael, you would know that the idea that he would discuss an investigation before it was concluded is laughable. I do not even have a guess as to what the report will say or cover, and I really don't care. I am more intrigued with the lesson we can all learn from Michael than whatever the results will be. The truth can be a bit elusive. The truth fears Michael Horowitz because he will find it and he will report it...whatever it is.
