Think efficiency when communicating with leaders about privacy matters

By Jay P. Anstine, JD

Jay P. Anstine (jay.anstine@bannerhealth.com) is Compliance Program Director, Western Division, Banner Health, Greeley, CO.

In the June issue, I commented on some strategies for physicians related to a privacy matter.^[1] This month I would like to cover a key strategy for communicating with healthcare leaders: communicating with efficiency. On a daily basis, healthcare leaders are constantly challenged by time and their attention being pulled in multiple directions at once. When communicating with healthcare leaders, think “efficiency.” Below are some communication strategies to ponder.
